The MBTA’s ferry service on the Ava Pearl from Blossom Street Pier in Lynn to Long Warf in Boston will now run until Oct. 31. Fares were reduced during the shutdown of the Summer Tunnel earlier this year and are currently priced at $7 for a one-way ticket.

Weekday service includes three trips from Blossom Street Pier to Long Warf on weekday mornings and two trips leaving Blossom Street Pier during late afternoons.

Ferries from Long Warf to Blossom Street Pier depart twice on weekday mornings and three times in the afternoon.

According to the release, after the Lynn ferry service closes for the year, it will begin again at some point in 2024, although no timeline has been announced yet.

“This decision is a huge win for the city,” state Rep. Dan Cahill, whose district includes parts of Lynn, said. “We are one step closer to the Lynn ferry becoming an integral and permanent part of our transportation landscape.”
